Art Unit: 1791

1.The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 3 and 6-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kameyama et al (see paragraphs 0028, 0043, 0049, 0052 and 0066).

The applied reference discloses the instant method of forming a polarizer including the steps of dyeing the PVA film with iodine (0043), stretching it in an aqueous boric acid bath with an iodide concentration of 1-18 wt % (0052) and washing the film in an aqueous solution containing an iodide at .5-20 wt % (0066), wherein the polarizer has the instant transmittance and polarizing efficiency. The dyeing pre-stretch is taught (see paragraph 0042) as well as the drying temperature and the use of potassium iodide. In short, the applied reference explicitly meets all the method steps and hence it is submitted that the instant dichroic ratio, iodine and potassium contents are inherently met. Ie, since the processing steps are met, the instant product limitations are submitted to be inherently met.

2.Applicant's arguments with respect to the claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

It is noted that the Sugino et al reference was not a 102, and applicant has provided a statement that the instant invention and that disclosed in Sugino et al were commonly owned at the time of the instant invention—thereby obviating the 103—so this reference has been dropped from the rejection. However, newly found Kameyama et al discloses the instant method steps and constitutes a 102 against the instant claims with the product limitations submitted to be inherent in the polarizer made by Kameyama et al. Prosecution has been reopened in view of the newly found reference.
